In his three years of ministry, Jesus meets a lot of people. Most of them are unnamed. Many of them are the anonymous members of “the crowds” who flock to see Jesus in the towns and countryside of Galilee.

Then there are the people to whom Jesus speaks. Among the unnamed are the woman at the well, the man born blind, the rich young man, the ten men with leprosy, the woman with the hemorrhage, the Roman centurion, and others. Among the named are Bartimaeus, the sisters Mary and Martha, Nicodemus, Joseph of Arimathea, Pontius Pilate and others.

The gospel stories about these people share one thing in common. It is not that Jesus performed a miracle for them. Some, like the rich young man, he only speaks with.

What they have in common is that we never learn what happened to them afterward. What happened after their encounter with Christ? Did the tax collector Zacchaeus follow through on his promise to give half of his wealth to the poor? Does the man born blind become a follower of Jesus? Regarding today's gospel, did the woman caught in adultery sin no more?

Upon further reflection, the gospel stories may seem incomplete because we don't know if the person involved actually made it to heaven or not. The stories implicate a new life and new beginning. They communicate the tremendous patience and love God has for humanity. Most of all they portray a healing reality when God is present to sinners.

Jesus does not enter the world to save it, and then allow it to be over-powered by sin again. He establishes his body, the Church, to be present to the world. The Sacraments of the Church establish and sustain his grace in us. Through the Church and the life of the Sacraments, Jesus is continually made present to sinners. As such, he perpetually provides companionship on the way forward to heaven and a “way back” for those who have strayed from his path of life.

Parish News: Fr. Bart Hutcherson, OP, preached a fantastic parish mission last week. It was a blessing to hear his inspired preaching and also to preview his new book on Alaska: “For the Beauty of the Earth: Exploring the Wonders of God in the 49th State.” Last year from December to July, Fr. Bart did parish missions and supply work throughout the state. He is an outstanding photographer. His book is both a photo tour and Catholic meditation on Divine creation. He uses the Canticle of Daniel, from which the title of his book is taken, for his meditations. Fr. Bart will be here through the middle of May. He is taking orders for his book, which will be formally launched at our parish bookstore, St. Paul's Corner, on May 6.

This Sunday, I will be serving in Glennallen and doing the evening Mass at St. Elizabeth Ann Seton's.
